FOOD GUIDE FOR MUSLIMS

Inspired by geography and shaped by history, Korea’s unique fare draws on nature’s bounty for its distinctive taste, texture, and world famous zest. With harvests from lush green rice paddies, sun drenched tangerine orchards and mountain valley chili pepper farms, Korean food beams with freshness. It delights the senses, invigorates the palate, and challenges foodies to explore regional variations.

With 5,000 years of culinary history, the cultural importance of food extends well beyond nourishment. When friends and colleagues greet each other in the morning, they ask, “Did you eat breakfast?” This is considered as much of a greeting as it is an inquiry. During ancestral rituals, food is the centerpiece of the ceremonial table. To sustain health, Koreans search out food respected for medicinal properties like kimchi to aid in digestion, and a panoply of herbs such as ginseng, ginger, garlic and ginkgo to promote well being.

Navigating the variety of dietary choices in Korea can be a challenge for any world traveler, even more so for those that have dietary constrictions due to faith. That is why we prepared this book, a guide to acceptable food for Muslims. It includes a catalogue of dishes with informational tags to help Muslims make informed food choices. To ensure accuracy, we received valuable input from the Korea Muslim Federation as well as Islamic culture and halal food experts.

Korean fare is famous for its spicy dishes, but there’s more to explore. This book identifies restaurants that visitors, like you, might enjoy because the food is consistent with halal standards. A variety of Korean dishes, tagged with different certificate reassurances, have been highlighted in order to help you explore this country’s cuisine. We hope this book helps the Muslim community discover the richness and diversity of Korea’s culinary delights.
Take a moment to study a Korean dining table and you will find two common features: an emphasis on healthy freshness and an unshakeable worldview that sees eating as a communal experience. Healthy dishes such as gujeolpan (platter of nine delicacies) and shared hotpot stews like sinseollo are two such examples. With a growing number of expat restaurant owners, Korea’s food scene is evolving thanks to classic international cuisine and modern fusion dishes. The result is a delectable, eclectic, and dynamic food culture.

Today’s Korean food is more accessible than ever before. That is why we are delighted to help Muslim travelers by creating opportunities to experience this country’s unique approach to food and dining. Throughout this book, we’ve tagged restaurants as ‘Muslim-friendly’ to help everyone make appropriate choices. We’ve also developed a restaurant rating system that provides accurate and useful information based on four categories.

Muslim-friendly Restaurant Categories

- Restaurant certified by Korea Muslim Federation (KMF). All foods are halal. Restaurants are certified as halal by Muslim restaurant owners themselves.
- Some halal dishes are provided but alcohol is sold. Contains meat but no pork.
- Self-certified Muslim-friendly. Pork-free Reservation required for Halal menu.
- Muslim owner/chef. Halal menu available.

Pictograms: In each category, the following pictograms were used to show detailed restaurant information.
In this guidebook, Muslim-friendly restaurants are divided into 6 regions. For user convenience, pictograms were used to mark restaurant information. Below are descriptions of the pictograms.

A map that shows the location of Muslim-friendly restaurants is in this guidebook. The map also shows useful tour information such as the location of prayer rooms, transportation, tourist sites, etc. Pictograms explained below were used to mark different types of information on the map.

General Information

To receive assistance by phone in foreign languages (English, Chinese, and Japanese), call the 1330 Korea Travel Hotline by dialing "1330" from any phone. For questions related to Seoul, you can also dial "120" for the Seoul Dasan Call Center.

The information in this guidebook was gathered in November 2016. Some facts and information regarding the places listed may have changed since then.

The Capital of Korea never seems to sleep. From sunrise along the Hangang River to midnight shopping, there’s something for everyone at every hour. Most tourists make their way to the popular spots, lunchtime window-shopping in insadong, teatime in Bukchon amidst traditional housing and sunset strolls past galleries, boutiques and fusion cafes in Samcheong-dong. Then there’s Itaewon, Seoul’s trendy expat town packed with Korean and international restaurants. There truly is something for everyone in this bustling metropolis.

Gyeonggi-do—the province surrounding Seoul—is the place for experiential travel. Ride the roller coasters at Everland, the country’s biggest theme park, get an up-close look at the demilitarized zone in Paju, or take a seat at the potter’s wheel and make your own ceramics in Icheon. With excellent transportation links, most sites in Gyeonggi-do are an easy day-trip from Seoul.

Celebrated for its natural beauty, Gangwon-do is a favorite destination for hikers, photographers and outdoor enthusiasts. Snow capped mountains in the winter, fields of flower blossoms in the spring, cool ocean breezes in the summer and maple forests in the fall where sunshine drips like golden honey await those who dare to venture beyond the capital. Any trip to Gangwon-do just wouldn’t be complete without sampling local specialties like grilled mackerel, spicy fish stew, rice noodles, and piping hot mushroom stew.

Centrally located in the peninsula, Daejeon is a quieter community that has a large population of commuters working in Seoul, as well as nearby government offices. It’s also a convenient starting point for treks to nearby attractions in South Chungcheong-do like Daecheon beach. In southern Daejeon, Jangtaesan Mountain’s dense metasequoia forest, razed trails and lush valleys make it a popular destination for day hikers looking for an easy outing.

On the southern tip of the Korean peninsula, Busan is known for a sharp dialect, spicy food, a tantalizing array of seafood choices, and a long list of must-see destinations. Chief among these are leisurely strolls along Moontan Road on Dalmaji Hill, the spectacular night view of Gwangandaegyo Bridge, and department store shopping in Haeundae.

A brisk 90-minute bus ride down the expressway, Gyeongju might be the country’s busiest tourist destination. Nicknamed “the museum without walls,” it is the place to see historical artifacts and culturally important destinations like Bulguksa Temple and the Seokguram Grotto, a UNESCO World Heritage site. Venture a bit further down the road to Gampo and you will find more than 200 seafood restaurants serving shrimp, king crab, lobster and raw fish.

Settlement of Islamic Culture started when Korea’s first Islamic mission, the Korea Muslim Federation (KMF), was established in October 1964. It is headquartered at the Seoul Central Masjid (732-21, Hannam-dong, Yongsan-gu, Seoul), and currently operates fifteen branches and 60 temporary prayer rooms across the country. Some 100,000 Muslims live in Korea. About 35,000 of them are native Koreans; the rest are Muslims who have immigrated from overseas. Korea is a popular travel destination for many reasons including leisure and medical treatment. As a Korean Imam, I often suggest that Muslims visiting Korea see Dongdaemun Market at dawn as well as Korea’s ancient palaces, and Teheran-ro in Gangnam while in Seoul.

These are the places to experience warm human affection and vitality, the two qualities that Koreans are most known for and, in this way, experience the true dignity and vitality of the Korean culture.

One of the biggest challenges for Muslim tourists while traveling in a non-Muslim country is the lack of information regarding Muslim-friendly restaurants. I truly hope this booklet addresses that challenge by guiding Muslim visitors to wonderful restaurants and comfortable travels.

He majored in Arabic and Islamic mythology at the Islamic University of Madinah in Saudi Arabia. As a Korean Imam at the KMF, he has had the privilege of meeting many Muslims traveling in Korea. With his background and wealth of experience, he helps the Korea Tourism Organization, the national tourism board for Korea, to make this country a better travel destination for Muslims.

A Talk with Muslim Students in Korea

Must-try Korean Food & Must-see Places for Muslims.

Kairun, 1996, Malaysia

I have been in Korea since 2014 and I am currently a full-time student at Konkuk University in Korea. My favorite Korean dish is gimbap because of the variety of ingredients that go into it. I like the diversity of flavors from the ingredients.

I have visited many tourist destinations in Korea. So far, my favorite is Jeju island. The many beautiful natural landscapes and other interesting destinations to visit made it a memorable location.

Syahidah, 1994, Malaysia

I am a student studying at Konkuk University in Korea. I like to eat doenjang-jjigae because it has a unique taste and it fits my preference. It’s not too salty and it’s a healthy dish. The Korean dish that I want to recommend to all the Muslim friends out there is noodles. There are a variety of noodles in Korea, including kal-guksu, naengmyeon, and bibim-guksu, just to name a few, and most of them can be enjoyed by Muslims.

I have visited Suncheon. Compared to Seoul, the natural ecological system is well preserved in Suncheon. I felt quite relaxed when I saw the natural environment in Suncheon, and looking at the sunset in the wetland in the area was a very memorable experience to me.

Muhammad Wajid Saleem, 1989, Pakistan

I have lived in Korea since 2014 and I am currently studying at Hanyang University. Two of my favorite Korean dishes are Kimchi fried rice (bokkeumbap) and pajeon (green onion pancake). They are both very tasty.

I have also visited many tourist places in Korea and among them, I would like to recommend Busan. In my opinion, Busan’s environment is very clean and there are many spots to visit and enjoy.

A decade ago, the TV drama Jewel of the Palace (Dae Jang Geum) mesmerized viewers around the world. It told the story of a young woman who combined fresh healthy food, such as lotus root, carrot and radish, to cure an ailing king. In addition to launching the Hallyu, a global wave of interest in Korean pop art and culture, it sparked a fascination with Korean cuisine.

For Muslim travelers, some Korean dishes contain ingredients that are inconsistent with halal traditions. To make Korean food accessible to a global audience, a cross section of popular dishes has been categorized to help Muslim travelers make informed dietary choices.

Though recipes for individual dishes may vary, the core ingredients and cooking methods are generally consistent across the country. If you are uncertain about the acceptability of a specific dish in a restaurant, point to the one of the translated dialogues in the back of this book and the restaurant staff will understand and answer your concerns.

Muslim-friendly Menu Classification

Vegetables only

Seafood-based food

Vegetable or seafood-based food

Meat-based food but no pork

Sometimes includes restricted items for Shia Muslim

Sometimes includes meat

Noodles in chilled soybean soup. The soup is made of boiled and pureed soybeans and seasoned with salt. A summer staple served with ice and yeolmu-kimchi (young summer radish kimchi) on the side.

Noodles in Cold Soybean Soup

Lightly pan-fried tofu simmered in soy sauce with red chili pepper, sugar, green onions and garlic. Served as banchan (side dish).

Braised Tofu

Powdered rice mixed with sugared water, sifted, and steamed in a siru (earthenware steamer) without any dressing powder. Due to its white color, believed to symbolize innocence and purity, beakseolgi is traditionally prepared to celebrate a baby’s 100th day or first birthday.

Snow White Rice Cake

This is a traditional Korean confectionery that is made by mixing puffed rice, beans, or toasted sesame seeds with a starch syrup. The mixture is rolled flat, allowed to harden, and then cut into various shapes.

Sweet Rice Puffs

A version of Bibimbap topped with wild vegetables that grow in the mountains. Mixed at the table with spicy gochujang, it is a fragrant dish filled with the flavor of wild mountain vegetables.

Wild Vegetable Bibimbap

Cubed bite-size radish seasoned with red chili powder, green onions, garlic, ginger and salted shrimps.

Radish Kimchi

A smooth gelatin made of acorn starch sliced and tossed with carrots, crown daisy, cucumber, and green chili pepper in a seasoned soy-sesame sauce.

Acorn Jelly Salad

A spicy stew made of fish, blue crab, baby octopus, shrimp, and other seafood. Seasoned with red chili powder sauce, giving it a hot, zesty flavor.

Spicy Seafood Soup
Julienned, tender young green onion stems folded into a flour batter with squid, clam meat, and oysters and pan-fried. Served with batter. Served with a soy vinaigrette dipping sauce.

해물파전
Haemul-pajeon
Seafood and Green Onion Pancake

Live, whole fish skinned, deboned and thinly sliced. Dipped in soy sauce, doenjang (soybean paste) or gochujang (red chili paste), or wrapped in vegetable leafs.

생선회
Saengseon-hoe
Sliced Raw Fish

A variety of fish, including mackerel, saury, and cutlass fish, are grilled and seasoned with salt or gochujang to taste.

생선구이
Saengseon-gui
Grilled Fish

This is a type of edible seaweed, or dried laver, made from seaweed that grows on rocks like moss. It is eaten by toasting it with sesame or perilla oil. Also, gimbap is made by rolling a variety of ingredients and rice in sheets of gim.

김
Gim
Laver

Fresh shrimp, squid, crab, fish, and clam and other seasonal catches cooked with soybean sprouts and Korean parsley in a thick spicy sauce.

해물찜
Haemul-jjim
Spicy Braised Seafood

Bibimbap served in a sizzling hot stone pot. The crispy rice at the bottom, mixed with various toppings and gochujang sauce, remains piping hot until the end of the meal.

돌솥비빔밥
Dolsot-bibimbap
Hot Stone Pot Bibimbap

Squid marinated in a spicy sauce with onions and carrots, stir-fried and served over steamed rice.

오징어덮밥
Ojingeo-deopbap
Spicy Stir-fried Squid with Rice

A nourishing porridge made with rice and minced abalone sautéed in sesame oil and simmered until thick. Well-loved for the chewy texture of abalone and a subtle flavor that envelopes the palate.

전복죽
Jeonbok-juk
Rice Porridge with Abalone

Blanched baby octopus cut into pieces and stir-fried in a spicy sauce made of red chili powder and minced garlic. Onions, carrots and other vegetables can be added.

낙지볶음
Nakji-bokkeum
Stir-fried Octopus

Soft tofu stew with beef, fish, or clams in anchovy stock. A raw egg may be added to the hot stew. Ranges from extra spicy to mild.

순두부찌개
Sundubu-jjigae
Soft Tofu Stew

Noodles in hot anchovy broth with colorful garnishes. Typically served at weddings, birthdays, and other festive occasions.

칼국수
Kal-guksu
Noodle Soup

Fresh knife-cut noodles, made by rolling flour dough and slicing into thin noodles, cooked in anchovy sauce. Zucchini, potatoes, and seafood may be added.

잔치국수
Janchi-guksu
Banquet Noodles

 présents pour être lus naturellement.
Assorted Savory Pancakes
A colorful dish of beef, fish, and vegetable slices coated in flour or egg batter and pan-fried. The assorted jeons are tastefully arranged on a plate.

Platter of Nine Delicacies
Eight kinds of colorful vegetables and meats served in an octagonal wooden box. The vegetables are wrapped in the thin wheat crepes stacked in the central compartment and dipped in a mustard-soy sauce.

Stir-Fried Glass Noodles and Vegetables
Glass noodles stir-fried with beef and assorted mushrooms and vegetables. A colorful classic dish that is always served at large gatherings or special occasions.

Hand-pulled Dough Soup
Soft pieces of flour dough hand-torn and dropped into boiling stock. The stock is usually made with dried anchovies, but chicken or seafood stock may also be used.

Seaweed Soup
Miyeok (brown seaweed) simmered in clear beef, mussel, or anchovy broth. Miyeok is rich in iodine and calcium and is known to be particularly beneficial for postpartum mothers, which is one reason Koreans eat Miyeok-guk on birthdays as well as for other meals.

Spicy Noodles
Chilled noodles served with beef, egg garnish, cucumber, Korean parsley, and perilla leaves. The noodles, garnishes and vegetables are mixed together with a vinegar-based gochujang sauce or seasoned soy sauce.

Beef Bone Soup
A thick soup made of beef, shank bones and/or knucklebones gently simmered for hours. Rich in protein and calcium, Gomtang (beef bone soup) is a great restorative food for postpartum mothers and elderly patients.
Boiled chopped chicken with onions, carrots, shiitake mushrooms, and glass noodles. Everyone loves its salty, sweet and spicy taste.

Minced beef rib meat seasoned with garlic and soy sauce, molded around the bone and char-grilled while brushing with a soy sauce mixture. It is characterized by its soft yet chewy texture.

Chicken pieces marinated in a gochujang (red pepper paste) sauce, and stir-fried in a flat grill pan with cabbage, sweet potato, carrots, or teok(rice cake). A local dish of Chuncheon city in Gangwon Province.

Bulgogi is prepared with beef that has been marinated in thick soy sauce, honey, minced green onion, garlic, sesame seeds, and pepper, and then grilled. The excess liquid can be mixed with rice, which tastes as good as the Bulgogi itself.

This dish is a stew of chicken, potato, and onion with seasoning. At the end of the meal, any leftover broth is combined with rice and fried.

A soup made of beef brisket and innards, radish, leek, taro stems, and fiddleheads. Seasoned with red chili pepper for a spicy flavor.

A hot pot of seafood, meat, and vegetables cooked at the table in a brass sinseollo pot over hot charcoals in a central cylinder. A dish representative of royal cuisine.

Minced beef rib meat seasoned with garlic and soy sauce, molded around the bone and char-grilled while brushing with a soy sauce mixture. It is characterized by its soft yet chewy texture.
